

INFANT GEAR PICKS

Camping with infants requires a little more forethought. Here are a few items that make camping with little ones more comfortable and happy.

Little Mo, Morrison Outdoors

Safe sleep keeps us parents up at night. This insulated sleep sack for infants keeps your little one warm while providing a safe sleep solution.

Peapod, KidCo

Whether you want to give your infant a shaded, breathable place to chill during the day at camp, or you are setting them up for their own space in the tent at night, the Peapod provides shelter and space. Bonus, a padded base keeps them comfortable!

Baby Shusher, White Noise

The background sounds at camp keep your littlest camper up at night. A little white noise can go a long way towards helping your baby fall into some much needed deep sleep after a day of play outside.

Pop and Jump Bouncer

It's simply a matter of fact that you will need to set your infant down at camp sometimes. This Pop and Jump bouncer packs down small, and easily comes along to keep your little one entertained.

Zutano Fleece Booties

Keeping your infant's toes and fingers warm is one of your top priorities at camp. These fleece booties are not only soft, but are also nearly impossible for an infant to remove on their own.

Ergo 360 Child Carrier

Sometimes you just have to go hands-free at camp. While there are several carriers out on the market, we love this one because it allows children with neck support to face forward.

Aquaphor Ointment

Wind can really do a number on your little one's skin. This is one of the ointments we have found for keeping skin feeling soft and moisturized during adventure.

Medala Car Adapter Charger

Pumping can feel like a limiting factor for many of us adventure moms. Be sure to bring either a power pack or car charger for the weekend adventures away from home.

Dock A Tot

Need to find a shady spot to lay your infant down while you cook dinner or set up camp? This is a great pillow for infants/newborns. Pro-tip? A pattern design helps it look new after a clean when you get home.
